Item #128-EL900010

128-EL900010
$9,506
Regular $9,615

FEATURES

- Capable of welding and brazing aluminum alloys, galvanized sheet metal, stainless, and high strength steel
- Synergic pulsed technology is required by most OEMs for aluminum welding. Two-roller wire feed that can weld very thin aluminum with full penetration without burn-through
- Inverter technology enables precision electronic control of output power for better quality welds
- Two types of torches are standard with MultiMig power source — a standard MIG torch or the unique push-pull torch
- The Elektron Push-Pull system torch has an up-down digital current adjust at your finger tip, thanks to a feeder built into the grip. The very small and light weight torch (no bulky spool-gun) enables real time control of welding process by control of the wire feed speed and current level. The push-pull system corrects many of the problems encountered with feeding and welding soft aluminum wire down to 0.6mm
- Can operate in pulse synergic, synergic, or conventional mode
- Double Pulse feature — mechanically and electrically controls the welding parameters to achieve a TIG-looking (fish scale) weld bead

FSE PICK NUD105-R025E

NUD105-R025E
$149
Regular $169.95

Avoid damaging a vehicle's electrical connections and prevent come backs!! Flex Probes enable connecting to an electrical connector's terminal with the proper size mating terminal reducing the risk of damaging the terminal. Flex Probes also eliminate the need to back probe or pierce wires (opening up the risk of future corrosion) by providing connectivity access to each terminal in a connector.

The latest in the line of Ford Flex Probe Kits, this newest release kit includes all of the probes from the previous D-kit and now adds two each of the Micro Pin (.5mm) Probe.

Additionally, all probes are now printed with the tip size to aid technicians in using the properly sized Flex Probe terminal tip when mating with a connector's terminal.
